this New Hampshire child "
This is extraordinary language, but it is not exaggerated in the estimate of men who knew his whole career, as Dr van Rensselaor dul, or who were observers of the latter part of his public life, as I was. My recollections of his influence among men and of the latest events of his career are clear and decided. An impueliberate opinion is that no American, either in political or military service, ever a united Mr.

In saying this I do not overlook the clauss of the revolutionary fathers, which were ore-unit next in their day, but upon the foundations which they laid must be erected the building secondary to the view and increase of a scale in which they faid thust be erected the builting according to the plan and purpose of a vast nation that should maintain the rights of all people, and extend the welfare of the common wealth to the latest governy. In this work Mr Webster was the master builder.

Not long after Mr. Webster's death it was to be to be the parties with the exception of the fanatical shofitionists, that his highest ambition throughout life was to serve his country and to bind all parts together under the great charter of our liberties, of which he was the belief expounder and defender. He was in public life for a third of a century, and during all hat time, his biographer informs us, he never shrunk from the full discharge of all his responsibilities. He never falled his country in the hour of her need. He was anchere independent, self poised steadfast. You could calculate him like a planet, and one of his observers. His life was a surere of great acts for great purposes one of his ablest contemporaries said. "He devoted him self, the ardor of his pouth, the energies of him machood and the antimunal wisdom of his riper years to the affairs of legislithon and diplomacy, preferring the neares keeping measulated the honor, establishing the boundaries and wind cating the neutral rights of his country and laying its foundations deep and sure. And he contended with ill the force of logic and history and wistom and the force of logic and history and wistom and partotism for the maintenance and supremacy of the great national charter over all sectional claims and considerations. This supreme conviction of his is the key to his celebrated specific that is placed in most amount of molern times. It was widely circulated and became universally popular. I was fit and the requestly employed for reading and declaimating in schools. I cannot forbeat to hote the closing sentences, to remain you that the integrity of the Union was the one great aim of his pole callife.

No one disputed that there was an absolute No one disputed that there was an absolute provision for this in the constitution of the United States. It was odicus to the North and no law had over been enacted to carry it into effect. Now the South pressel it, and Webster advocated 1—partly on the ground that such a law would be clearly constitutional, currying into effect in article which lad never lean enforced, and partly it aling the extended to the South, which was at which that and in, exited with and slave propagatolists.

Happy is the man who can cast anchor, as the aposite did, and wait for the day. But there are many who beleve- and the number is invasang—that Mr We oster's patriotism guided in his emergency, as a had ever done. He knew, as Benton and many other public men did, that a great party at the bouth was in dead earnest and he would fain deprive them, by passing the "ominibus bill," of every protect for creating 'ivil war. Thut, he feared, and simost predicted, would be the final issue—the arbitrament of the sword. And when the issue came he would not have it said that the loyal states had volated the compromises of the constitution, nor refused to permit them to be enforced.

Thus obliterates prejudicel and softens the uperflues of human judgment. Charges made in the heat of contraversy are often abandoned when tranqual reflection recurses is sway. Men who debounced Mr. Lincoln in severest terms came to be his warm advocates when they knew him better.

this better warm anyocates when they knew him better. These remarks are abundantly illustrated in the case of Panuel Webster. In 1882, a century after his birth, a remarkable assemblage guthered at Marshfield, around his grave—the most distinguished men of the din were there. The president of the United States and members of column the accuracy. president of the United States and members of cabinet, the representatives of foreign countries eminent statesmen and jurists scholars mer-chanic, artists, and a large concourse of the resident farmers, who hald the memory of the led Webster in the highest esteem and venora-tion.

Act it was not the pre-eminent standing of the living men who gathered to do honor to the il lustrious dead, it was not frault prestage nor mancial accountations, nor political preferment—nothing that was now secular or insterial which brought them together But there was one thing which I think should be fairly regarded as a clearance of Webster's fame. I rafer to a document which was then for the first time made public. It was can posed by Webster and submitted to the calonel in which with his keen political foreight and sagnety be clearly set forth the immunent dan ger of secession, the lack or insufficiency of ordinances to prepare the country against if the right of the nation to corec the states that attempted to leave it, and it; short the time in expression of the constitution for the preservation of the to on.

around the grave of Webster, is not explained by these attractions, I owever great. It shows a change of sentiment respecting the value of his career to the country man shall work other changes in the same frection, for we conclude that the predominant attraction was the whole character and life of the man him self. He is more famous to-day thru he was when he died and his renown will last, for it is a part of our country's.

There are very few of our great men who have taught us an impressively, and on the whole so consistently, the estimable worth of character.

The formation of characte shoud the a theu endward in the standard of the man patter. If "the proper study of mankind mat," it must be given at the foundain and the bome training of Damel Webster discloses the trate of character which afterward governed his life. Without the restraints and discipline upplied in the home, a man of his great into lect and strong propensities would have run a careet of dishonor and found a premature grave. He was a man of elevated sentiments of religious influence of patriotic faithfulness, field immonable as the sun when once intelligently settled upon his course. In after life Mr Webster showed both the tenderness of affection and the knowledge of the scriptures which be often quoted or referred to—in a manner that reflected credit i pon heard and beart, and made his speeches tell upon the audiences he addressed by andressmat, orna ment, or illustration. Some of his greatest orations will live fore an oconnection with the principles he insibiled in his lome. The Dartmouth college has will always be quoted for its arguments on the validity of contracts. It has a remarkable his tory more interesting to the legal profession than to us as suggestive of points which established precedents and grow into statutes. In the meantime the intricate machinery of demagoguery is kept in motion, requiring the labors of a vast number of writers, printers, lecturers, editors, newspapers, campagin documents, halls, club-rooms, committees, processions, banners, transparencies—in all which nothing is more transparent to reasons ble people than the absence of patriotism and common sense, to which must be added the actual cost if a presidential campagin amounting to man, unitions of dollars, together with the masapi led labor of all these political agents and the inferription of business and labor—both of which initiat a positive loss upon the country, much greater than the actual funds expended on the campaign.

Another factor enters into these scenes of conflict—the immornities which attend and are promoted by them. It is deplorable to think of the vices of slander and lying which are practiced, not in secret only, but in public, and even countenanced and in some measure justified by it er who are reputed to be respectable and claim to transact their affairs in an bonorable manner. And every four years these desprace ful scenes are re-enacted and the deplorable manner. Now the trumph comes when along this his notable career the gift of Providence falls that makes as me lives distinguished. If the people were consulted, the men where for all in respectable employment and externed competent for the public service, would be smashed, and the innesses they belong—to some sect of a pennentiary or be turned out to rook for their living. If such a state of things could eviat in our country, it would encourage the study of political is lence—the science of government—and put an end to the study of particianship with its image intrigues, bribert and profigsay. The intense thirst, for other would be greatly reduced and at least kept within bounds—a fever which is a peculiarly American disease, chronic throughout the body politic, and which paralizes triny of its victims and smiles some of them dead. Let a man find describe the office by a fair and intelligent inte, and then perhaps the office will be reduced somewhat when the public.

This paper is hable not to appear next week to fact, it will not appear. The whole force is going on a joing. The editor, publisher, furnier, sir, is going to hilly-ankee to the annual meeting of the Masonio grand lodge, if he doesn't switch off and go to some soldiers' rounion, of which the woods are full next week, and the balance of our crew will probably go to Green Lake. We are in need of a little play-spell, and our readers can get along without a paper one week by calling at the barber shop for the latest news.

A CRI OF ANGLISH

There is one in hydral at least who doesn's think that "the opposition of T-th OnEgovian to a man is sure to elect him." That inhividual is Mr Hipple Marston, late ring candidate fo the office of state treasurer. He writes to the ring organs a letter filled wate the most woth lamentations over his defeat, and with fierce mathemas hurled upon The Oregonian for having brought it about,—but he principal re-sult of his wall of sorrow, disappointment and rage is his admirable though unconscious suc-cess in showing how excellent a thing it was that his defent was accomplished. This scrubbelief that the name of his manier would pull him through Nota wave of doubt rolled arms were any voters in Oregor who were not worshippers of his master, and The Orandovit's opposition to houself was just the thing calculated to elect him. But it's returns undicoved him disembanted him and the way he whites, screame, tones, belows and how a about his defeat at i charges. AND ALL MALARI IL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this elebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the orbit for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPFEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chids and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the 'trub of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the direct onsare strictly followed and carried out. In a great many 03498 a single dese has the direct consarestrictly followed and coarried out. In a great many cases a single does has been sufficient for a cure and whole families have been cared by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in avery case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller dect. for a week or two after the discuse has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Urally this medicine will not require any air all to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require acatharti medicine, after having taken thrue or far losses of the Tonic, a single does of KENT'S VECETABLE FAMILY FILLS will be sufficient.
